We are going to learn about the Worm Charming Championships.
Warm-up 2 min

Which animal lives underground?
Worm charming is a different way of attracting earthworms from the ground. It was used for collecting bait for fishing. Now, more people play it as a competitive sport.

What is worm charming?
The World Worm Charming Championships started in 1980 in the small English village of Willaston. Now there is an annual event that celebrates the sport.

When did the World Worm Charming Championships start?
The competition takes place on a small piece of land. During the competition, worm charmers must lure worms to the surface within half an hour. They cannot dig or lure out the worms by using drugs or water, but they can lure them to the surface by using vibrations.
The person who charms the most worms to the surface will be the winner. The current world record is held by a 10-year-old girl called Sophie, who was able to lure five hundred and sixty-seven worms to the surface, in 2009.
